

Fifth topic:

SUBSTITUTE MONEY

Money is an abstract convention that represents human work or energy. Through capital gains, interest can be accumulated on capital and thus money multiplied. Within a cybernetic society, money can be directly replaced by real value, that is, qualified time. This will eliminate the poor and the millionaires at the same time, universalizing a middle class with a high standard of quality of life.

Electronic means will allow devices such as the cell phone, which can be used in bracelets or in glasses of extended reality, serve as a support for instant transactions (this already exists).

The most creative subjects within society will be the ones who will be able to accumulate the greatest amount of credit and enjoy greater access to the different services. Knowledge will be rewarded and there will no longer be the need to do business. As money no longer exists, accumulating it will no longer be the main goal. The new pattern of goals will be scientific and artistic merits.

Everyone will have their basic needs assured, in accordance with their universal rights. The time qualified for the provision of their community services is an additional one that gives them access to a higher level of goods. Let us remember that the workforce has been replaced by robots and artificial intelligence, in all repetitive tasks.

In turn, in the restructuring of world society, every citizen at birth must enjoy the following guaranteed rights:

1. Full access to health.
2. Full access to a healthy diet.
3. Total free and free access to education.
4. Full access to decent housing.
5. Full access to decent work.

6. Full access to digitized government.

The money will not exist, as a consideration for the basic universal rights, each individual is obliged to an hourly load to provide specific community services, within the new emerging system. Since repetitive and physical tasks are accomplished by robots, humans engage in intellectual and creative actions. This social model will be common at the end of the present XXI century.

QUESTIONS:

1- Pollution is the effect of the overexploitation of resources within the capital system. Should we replace such a system, to eliminate the negative effect?

2- Do you agree with supplanting money for “qualified time”?

3- Do you agree with the new 6 basic rights of every citizen within the global restructuring of the world?
